

Abstract

Visual structural functional textile clothing designs are created using a programmed computer and advanced 5 computing techniques. The computer is supplied with information from a number of databases relating to human body properties and relating to textile material characteristics. The method is used to generate functional designs that are visually displayed for use 10 by a textile designer or engineer.